EQUALITY AMONG RACES.

Negro Preacher Discourses in Gibson County.

Milan Tenn., Sept. 1.—Rev. Par-tee, a negro Methodist divine, has found preaching on the subject of social equality to be a serious task, especially after the service.

Rev. Partee has been holding a meeting at Brazil, in the northeast end of this county, and one night this week arose in the pulpit and announced that his subject for the evening would be upon the line of "Social Equality." He called heavily upon his ability to explain the subject to his dusky congregation. On his way to the church next evening the parson was taken from his buggy and given a severe thrashing, and that he will remember for some time. He was advised that he was worst yet to come, and Partee without delay made his way towards home at this place. It is rumored that he will be given a time limit to leave Milan.

Editor Shot at from Ambush.

McEwen, Tenn., Aug. 31.—Some unknown party last night fired two Winchester bullets at Editor L. H. Hopkins, of the New Era, as he, with Robert Morris, was sitting on a car at the depot. The shots came from the vicinity of a building nearby, but it was too dark to see the would-be assassin, and when search was made, no one was found. One of the bullets passed uncomfortably close to Mr. Hopkins' head and broke a window in the depot.

A Kentucky Colonel the First Victim

The first victim of the Texas law prohibiting drinking on trains was—and perhaps with some appropriateness—a Kentucky colonel, says the Baltimore Sun. The Kentuckian had a pocket flask, decorously concealed in the folds of a frock coat. The journey was a long one and in the course of his travels the gentleman from the Blue Grass State—and likewise the State of many distilleries, licensed and illicit—felt a dryness in his throat and decided to try the Kentucky remedy. In a dignified and deliberate way he walked to the ice cooler in the coach, drew his flask with a becoming modesty, moistened his throat and was about to return the flask to its hiding place, when some one touched him on the shoulder. With the cordiality and good fellowship which are characteristic of the Kentuckian he immediately offered his flask to the stranger, invited him to partake and then, as a Kentucky gentleman always should, turned aside so that he might not seem to be watching to see how much of the liquor should be consumed. But this was no congenial spirit, no comrade suffering from drouth, but a minion of the law who arrested the colonel. The latter paid $10 and costs, and it is said that it may be years before he recovers from the shock.

OUR EXCHANGES.

The suggestion of a general primary for all State officers next year is feasible and opportune. The people are disgusted with the methods that obtained during the last gubernatorial campaign, when snap action and fraudulent counts were rife in the effort to foist upon the people a candidate they did not want. Action by counties on different dates engenders bitter feelings and breeds a spirit of factionalism hurtful to the party. Let the contest be settled over the entire State in one day, and the people will be well rid of so much unseemly and enervating strife.—Hickman County News.

Whooping Cough.

This disease commences very much the same as an ordinary cold, but may soon be identified by its peculiar cough. The principal danger is from the accumulation of tough, tenacious mucus in the throat, choking the child, or the prolonged and violent coughing, rupturing the tiny air cells of the lungs. When neglected complications arise. That is, it leads to other and more dangerous diseases, convulsions, pneumonia, etc., which often results fatally. "Cousen's Honey of Tar" will keep the the cough loose and the expectoration easy, allay the irritation and tickling in the throat, making the fits of coughing less violent and less frequent. The reason this remedy has had such phenomenal success in the treatment of whooping coughs is that the manufacturers of of Cousen's Compound Honey of Tar are the sole proprietors of the process of manufacturing Castanina, a powerful alkaloid obtained exclusively from Castanea Americana, or the American chestnut leaf. This almost specific remedy for whooping cough, taken from the chestnut leaf and added to other valuable medicinal agents—horseradish, wild cherry, squills, blood root, mullein, tulsi, honey, tar, etc., makes the compound prescription, known since 1861 as "Cousen's Compound Honey of Tar"—The only absolute and positive remedy for the distressing cough known as the Whooping cough. Give it a trial. Sold by Red Cross Pharmacy, Watson & Kimsey, Props.
